Mowing

...it's not just a prairie grass anymore

Legacy® Buffalograss

Green Valley Turf Company is proud to grow a grass that uses less water than other turf grasses. Legacy® is available from our fields in Colorado. Legacy® Buffalograss has a slow vertical growth habit and needs less mowing. Today, you can have a beautiful manicured lawn without the constant watering and mowing. Green Valley Turf Co. is the only licensed producer of Legacy® Buffalograss in Colorado.

Less Irrigation

Buffalograss has survived for millions of years, through droughts, floods and insect invasions with no help from man or his chemicals. It is the only turfgrass that is native to the United States. Legacy® has a very low water requirement and a deep root system that grows several feet into the soil. This root system allows it to draw water and nutrients from a larger area. Legacy® thrives on 1/4 inch of water per week or less.

Less Mowing

Legacy® Buffalograss grows to a maximum height of 4" to 6" and has a slow vertical growth habit. There is no set mowing schedule for Legacy®. For a manicured turf, you will need to mow once every two to three weeks. For a natural look, mow it in the spring and let it go. It stops growing at about 6" and is very uniform.

Soft Texture & Color, Thick Density

Legacy® has a dark blue-green color and fine blade with soft hairs. Its dense canopy of fine leaf blades creates a very soft turf that handles traffic when it is actively growing.

Excels in Full Sun, Very Cold Hardy

Legacy® loves full sun and hard to deal with southern exposures. It also shows better shade tolerance than previous varieties. Legacy® will grow in shade, but it is not as aggressive and needs a half day of sun. Unlike other buffalograsses that winter kill, Legacy® can withstand cold, dry Colorado winters and is cold hardy to Zone 2.

Legacy® Differences

- Goes dormant in late September & greens up in April
- Installed only from mid spring to early fall when growing

...it's not just a prairie grass anymore

Developed by the University of Nebraska and released for sale in 2000, Legacy® changed the way people look at buffalograss turf.
